COURAGE AND SACRIFICE LAUDED WITH NEW PURPLE HEART STAMP

By TAMARA GRIPPI

CARMEL POSTAL clerk Andy Tridento will never forget what happened July 23, 1969. As a 21-year-old sergeant serving in the U.S. Army in Vietnam, Tridento knew his platoon was in bad shape. Half of his comrades had been killed or wounded the day before.

As squad leader — in charge of "what was left of my squad" — Tridento was helping his team prepare for combat: digging foxholes and clearing brush to defend against another enemy attack.

Suddenly, Tridento looked up to see the red flash of a rocket-propelled grenade. "It felt like a huge fist hit me, picked me up and threw me," he said.

The blast hurled him 30 feet, perforated both his ear drums and left shrapnel in his right forearm. Tridento's best friend, Mike "Angel" Ruhter, was killed in the attack.

Nearly 25 years after being awarded a Purple Heart, Tridento received another honor this week from the United States Postal Service. The agency, which recently unveiled a commemorative Purple Heart stamp, held a ceremony at the G.I. Forum in San Jose to rec-

Last-minute visa offered to Weil

■ Friends in high places save day

By PAUL MILLER

FOR MORE than a week, the fate of this year's Bach Festival and the July 19 grand opening of the new Sunset Theater have been in the hands of Peter Bodde.

He is the man in charge of the United States consulate in Frankfurt, Germany, where Bach Fest conductor Bruno Weil must get a visa to enter the United States.

Until a last-minute e-mail arrived Thursday night at his home in Germany, Weil had lost all hope of getting the visa in time for opening night, much less for rehearsals that begin in Carmel next week.

"The U.S. consulate told me July 22 was the earliest," Weil said. "I told them there was a festival, and I have to be there, but they just said, 'You can't go.' I was desperate."

After a frustrating series of bureaucratic snafus, Maestro Bruno Weil can pick up his visa Tuesday in Frankfurt, U.S. officials say. That gives him just enough time to return to his home in Munich for a flight Wednesday to San Francisco. Rehearsals for the Bach Fest begin Thursday. Weil will be seriously jet-lagged, but says he "can't wait" to conduct in the new Sunset Center theater.

Revamped SB 149 spares water board

By MARY BROWNFIELD

SACRAMENTO — A SENATE Bill to overhaul the water board was transformed into a water-project deadline Wednesday by an Assembly committee which otherwise probably would have killed the measure.

Sacramento Democrat Darrell Steinberg, who sits on the nine-member Assembly Local Government Committee chaired by Simón Salinas, proposed amendments to Bruce McPherson's Senate Bill 149 which would:

- maintain the current board setup, with five directly elected directors and two appointees;
- require approval of an environmental impact report within three years for a water project providing "more than 10,700 acre-feet of water;"
- force the board to "sunset" — legislatese for "go away" — if that goal is not met; and
- emphasize affordable housing as the top priority for new water.

Steinberg opposed McPherson's move to replace elected water board members with mayors from Peninsula cities, but he supported SB 149's elimination of voter approval for water projects, calling the requirement "overkill."

Flanked by supporters, including Monterey Mayor Dan Albert, Seaside Mayor Jerry Smith and representatives of a water-rights coalition and an affordable housing agency, McPherson defended his bill, telling committee members he lacks confidence in the district's ability to create a water supply.

He highlighted its 25-year history of inactivity while

CITY LURES EMPLOYEES INTO EARLY RETIREMENT

By TAMARA GRIPPI

IN ITS latest attempt to stay solvent in the rough economy, the Carmel City Council agreed July 1 to offer a golden handshake to allow some employees to boost their years of service and retire early.

The council voted unanimously to offer the retirement incentive in hopes of reducing its payroll while avoiding layoffs.

"This is a humane way of allowing some of our older employees to leave earlier," said councilman Gerard Rose. "Everyone knows if the economy hasn't recovered a year from now, we'll be seriously looking at employee cutbacks."

City administrator Rich Guillen said 22 employees, age 50 and older, are eligible to take advantage of the two years of work credit, though he doubted everyone would sign up for the plan.

The city offered the same opportunity to its employees during the recession of the early 1990s and there were no takers. "I'm not expecting the city will see 22 people walk out the door," Guillen said.

If all the eligible employees did take advantage of the early retirement, the city would be required to pay approximately $766,000 to the California Public Employees' Retirement System.

Guillen noted that the annual payroll savings for the 22 employees would amount to $1.5 million.

Larry Foy challenges Henson

■ Quick decision follows change in McPherson bill

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH MORE than three decades of experience in the water business, Carmel resident Larry Foy figures he's an ideal candidate for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District board of directors. He announced Thursday he will seek District 5 Director Zan Henson's seat.

New state legislation that would leave the water district intact while requiring it to solve the water supply problem (see story, this page) inspired him to step up, since the revised law, approved by an assembly committee Wednesday, could shift the water board's no-growth stance to one of action.

"And that's what I want to be a part of," he said.

Working now as a consultant and serving as president of the Monterey County Hospitality Association, Foy retired in 1999 after 32 years with American Water Works, the parent company of Cal-Am, including 17 years as Cal-Am's vice president and general manager on the Peninsula.

During that time, Cal-Am studied a multitude of water options, including dams on the Carmel River, off-stream storage and desalination.

"So I am very familiar with all the things in the valley and the system and what it takes to make it operate," he said.

While he sees the water management district's current proposal of a desalination plant at Sand City as infeasible, Foy said the Moss Landing desal project suggested by the California Public Utilities Commission makes much more sense.

Larry Foy

And while Foy believes a dam on Carmel River would be the least expensive and most logical way to solve the Peninsula's perpetual water crisis, he said that idea "won't go forward" under state and federal environmental laws.

Foy said he also supports a project which would produce more water than the 10,730-acre-feet being pumped illegally from Carmel River. "I think my experience and expertise in water management will help to move a water project forward," he said.

Making progress might help the board regain the confidence of the 18,149 voters who said last November the water district should be dissolved, according to Foy. He worked diligently toward the passage of that ballot measure, but sees no irony in the fact that he is now running for a board seat.

"The people gave a vote of no confidence in November, and the board totally ignored that," he said, adding that he is running to do what the voters want. "They want a water supply for lots of record, remodels and affordable housing."

But that's all, according to Foy. "I don't want to see new subdivisions. We're only looking at infill — we do not have the land for massive growth."

Zan Henson was unopposed when he ran for the board in 1999.

No water in the well for humanitarian mission

By TAMARA GRIPPI

WHEN FRANK Perry urged the Carmel City Council to grant him .06 acre foot of water July 1, he wasn't asking for himself, but for desperate children needing a school in war-torn Sierra Leone. But he walked away from the meeting empty handed, anyway.

Perry is donating two valuable Mission Street lots — one with an older home and another that is vacant — to Salesian Fathers, a Catholic charity that plans to sell the property to support its charitable work.

'You're getting a raw deal here, Frank.'

— Gerard Rose

Potential buyers of the property want to tear down the older home and build a new, bigger house straddling both lots. The only hitch is they want enough water to build a third bathroom in the new house. Perry hoped the city would give him .06 acre-foot of water from the 1.052 acre-feet in its unallocated reserve.

After being turned down by the planning commission, Perry appealed to the city council. Although they sympathized with Perry, council members agreed the city wasn't in a position to give away water.

"While the request for additional water is very well intended, the fact of the matter is the city has no available water to be given away," said councilwoman Paula Hazdovac.

Even without the .06 acre foot, Perry's lots have enough water for a house, she noted. "It isn't the optimum development wanted, but there is enough to make some development there."

Perry said he has been paying for an active water meter and tap on the vacant lot for almost 30 years.

Senior planner Chip Rerig noted that in recent years, the city has turned down other water requests — including one from another man who also had an active water meter.

Councilman Gerard Rose cast the lone vote for Perry's water. "You're getting a raw deal here Frank, and I won't allow it, at least not with my vote," Rose said. Hazdovac, Sue McCloud and Dick Ely voted to withhold the water. Barbara Livingston was absent.

Business improvement district dead on the vine

By TAMARA GRIPPI

FACED WITH protests from almost half of the downtown businesses who would foot the bill for a $250,000-a-year improvement district, the Carmel City Council this week gave up on the idea.

"Clearly the business community has sent a message and I, for one, have gotten it," said Carmel City Councilman Gerard Rose at the July 1 meeting. The rest of the council agreed it would be pointless to do any further work on a proposal generating so much opposition.

Carmel City Administrator Rich Guillen told the council that 284 of the city's 696 businesses — representing $116,313 worth of the proposed $250,000 BID annual budget — mailed in cards to city hall objecting to the tax.

Though the opposition fell just short of the more than 50 percent required by state law to stop a BID, the council chose not to press the point.

Several council members had been hopeful a BID would help boost tourism while saving the city the $100,000 it pays every year for promotion. The BID was first proposed four years ago by a group of innkeepers. The original proposal would have generated $500,000 a year and drew strong opposition.

Second chance

So a year ago, the council decided to go back to the drawing board. A citizens committee and a paid consultant collaborated on a new proposal for a smaller annual budget, $250,0000.

The revamped BID — designed to raise money for marketing, public relations, promotional events and beautification of the city — fared no better with the downtown businesses who would pay for it.

Though disappointed the BID would not materialize, the council didn't give up hope of finding some other way to get the business community to contribute.

Members asked Guillen to work on an alternative, but did not specify what they had in mind.

"I'd like to sit down with the interested parties and put our heads together to find an alternative everyone can live with," Guillen said. "The most important thing is to get the business community unified again and not divided as at the public hearing."

Guillen was referring to the April 29 "protest" hearing that attracted more than two dozen business owners objecting to the proposed tax.

That hearing ended abruptly after the city acknowledged it had not followed all the proper legal requirements to hold the meeting. City attorney Don Freeman said the city would have to hold another protest hearing it it wanted to move forward with the BID.

Hurt by misinformation

But Tuesday, the council agreed it would be a waste of time to hold a second protest hearing. Some council members argued the BID was the victim of much "misinformation" put out in the community.

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud said she was very disappointed the business community wasn't able to find a way to make the BID proposal work.

"I think the business district needs to contribute," McCloud said. "The city has really stretched to come up with $9 million to makes Sunset [renovation] go forward. I would ask for you to stretch and think beyond your own business."

Police & Sheriff's Log

Editor's note: The Monterey County Sheriff's Department no longer supplies deputies' daily patrol logs. It also has curtailed access to reports of burglaries, grand theft and other potentially serious crimes. The City of Carmel-by-the-Sea has its own police force and continues to allow our reporters to review patrol logs. But in surrounding neighborhoods, we are able to supply only very brief summaries of law enforcement calls.

Foul play suspected in husband's purse purchase

SUNDAY, JUNE 22

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female reported that her husband did not come home last night and may be missing. She later learned he made a purchase using his credit card at an Ocean Avenue leather store. She responded to the store but was not allowed access to the receipt until a CPD officer was present. Officer witnessed the viewing and she confirmed the receipt for the purchase of a woman's handbag had been signed by her husband. The receipt was dated 06/21/03 at 1529 hours, and the female was somewhat concerned and agitated that her husband cannot be found. She may file

New cop to cut police OT

But still no dollars to replace canine cop

By MARY BROWNFIELD

WITH TWO officers retired as of July 1 and three more on medical leave, the remainder of the Carmel police force is working overtime. But some relief arrived this week in the form of the city's newest cop, Jennifer Burbank, who was sworn in Tuesday.

The event was sweet for CPD Chief George Rawson, not only because Burbank is the first female sworn officer to join Carmel's ranks in six years, but because her arrival means one fewer vacancy to fill.

"Today is a good day, because a new officer's face means less overtime," Rawson said after Burbank's swearing-in ceremony.

Burbank, who trained at the police academy and spent two years working as a San Benito County Sheriff's deputy, is the first woman to join CPD since Officer Theresa Rabaut left in July 1997.

"This is something I've been wanting to do since I got here," Rawson said. Indio P.D, which he ran before coming to Carmel in late 2001, had three female officers including a commander, its ranks, but drawing female recruits to the Peninsula has proved a challenge.

CARMEL VALLEY ROAD HEADACHES FAR FROM OVER

By MARY BROWNFIELD

THE GRINDING is done, the potholes are filled and the asphalt is poured. But plenty of work — causing more delays — is in store for Carmel Valley Road during the next two months.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors hired a contractor July 1 for the next phase: scrubbing emulsion into the road with giant brushes to fill cracks and holes, according to public works director Lew Bauman.

"There will be no more work on the road that will be hard on your car's front end and get it dirty; the messy work is over," he told The Pine Cone. "The next two phases, although there will be some delays, will be relatively smooth. And most importantly, by fall we will have a beautifully rehabilitated Carmel Valley Road."

For years, motorists complained the pavement between Valley Greens Drive and Carmel Valley Village was more like a washboard. Much of the western section was repaved when lanes were widened and turn pockets were added last year, and public works began repairing sections between mid valley and the village in May. Traffic jams caused when east- and west-bound cars were forced to alternate use of a single lane have frustrated drivers since the grinding began.

The $60,755 contract with Western Emulsions, Inc. covers the "scrub seal" on cracked pavement on Carmel Valley Road and Davis Road in Salinas, according to Bauman's staff report. Western was the sole bidder for the scrub seal in Carmel Valley — even so, its bid was more than $2,000 under the estimated cost.

The scrubbing process will begin this month, followed in August by chip sealing — covering the road with oil and gravel — and fog sealing to hold the gravel in place. Lanes must be closed during those processes, according to Bauman, "but once the product has hardened, the road can return to service immediately."

Dirty rags burst into flame, damage garage

By MARY BROWNFIELD

A PILE of oily rags spontaneously combusted just before 11 Saturday night, burning a garage and fence on Perry Newberry Way, according to the Carmel Fire Department.

William Kucher had spent the afternoon treating his deck with sealant. Then he piled the oily rags outside his garage and left for the Monterey Bay Blues Festival. A few hours later, Kucher's neighbor noticed smoke and flames and called the fire department.

Were it not for his neighbor's watchful eye and quick response, Kucher's entire house might have gone up in flames, according to CFD Shift Commander Chuck August.

"We were very fortunate that we got there when we did, because in another two or three minutes, the fire would have gotten into the attic."

Four engines, two chief officers and 15 firefighters from three departments — Carmel, Carmel Valley and Cypress Fire stations at Rio Road and Carmel Hill — responded and kept the fire confined to the exterior of the garage and a fence. No one was injured in the blaze, which August estimated caused $20,000 in damage.

The fire commander had advice for other homeowners who plan to work with flammable paint, sealants, turpentine or strippers.

"The safest thing to do is to lay oily rags out flat, not put them in a pile, because spontaneous combustion needs enclosure to work," August said.

Council backs away from cutting mail delivery

By TAMARA GRIPPI

A COST-cutting maneuver approved by the Carmel City Council two weeks ago nearly re-opened the debate over mail delivery in the city.

But this week, council members rescinded their earlier decision to cut the city-sponsored home delivery service from six days to three days a week in order to save $16,000 next year.

City administrator Rich Guillen reminded the council of its promise, when it started home mail delivery two years ago, to provide the same level of service offered by the U.S. Postal Service.

Echoes of the contentious battle over mail delivery were heard once again at the council meeting July 1. One speaker urged the council to let the U.S. Postal Service take over the job, while someone else asked the council to pass a ban on mailboxes and street addresses.

Councilman Dick Ely, who was absent when the city passed its 2003/2004 budget two weeks ago, said he was surprised the council had chosen to reduce mail service to save money.

"Until we've eliminated the last position on city staff, we should nevermore consider reducing or eliminating mail service in the city," Ely said.

Currently, 131 people — most of them homebound seniors — receive the city-sponsored service, which costs approximately $40,000 annually. Cutting it to three days a week was one of several strategies the council used to trim its budget by $1.3 million. Faced with rising costs and faltering revenues, the city also had to take another $1 million out of its reserves to balance the budget.

Two years ago, the council voted to sponsor private mail delivery as a way to serve citizens who can't make it to the post office every day, while protecting Carmel's tradition of no street addresses or mailboxes.

That tradition was first called into question in 2000 when activist Joe Steinfeld moved to town and launched a divisive campaign for home delivery. Steinfeld maintained that Carmel's quaint tradition wasn't fair to the disabled and elderly who couldn't pick up their mail at the post office on Fifth Avenue.

At the time, many others argued that Carmel's unique traditions shouldn't be sacrificed. An informal mail-in poll conducted by Mayor Sue McCloud showed the vast majority of residents prefer going to the post office every day.

This week the council voted 3-1, with Paula Hazdovac dissenting, to take $16,000 out of reserves to fund the mail delivery six days a week. (Councilwoman Barbara Livingston was absent.)

Hazdovac argued the city could save the entire $40,000 by allowing the U.S. Postal Service to take over the job. "I think the people who want home mail delivery through the U.S. Postal Service deserve to have it," she said. "I seem to be the only one here who feels this way."

City offers two cents worth on affordable housing at Fort Ord

By TAMARA GRIPPI

AS THE Fort Ord Reuse Authority board grapples with how to create affordable housing on the former Army base, Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud offered an idea to get the ball rolling: Ask the developer of the upscale Seaside Highlands to chip in $5 million toward a housing trust.

McCloud, who represents the city on the FORA board, called Congressman Sam Farr this week to suggest the idea. "If we are serious about developing a housing trust and getting people to contribute, why don't we approach the CEO of Kaufman and Broad and ask them to start out the trust with a $5 million gift?" she said.

The mayor and the rest of the council held a brainstorming session on the affordable housing question at their July 1 meeting.

The FORA board will meet next week to make a decision whether to increase the amount of affordable housing required in future developments on the former Army base.

Senior planner Chip Rerig explained that Seaside and Marina, the two cities that received chunks of the former Army property, want the other jurisdictions, including Carmel, Monterey and Pacific Grove, to help pay for affordable housing there.

"They don't want to go it alone," Rerig said.

City councilman Dick Ely argued that Seaside and Marina want to "have their cake and eat it too."

"The fact of the matter is they've been given property with tremendous value," Ely said, and other cities received nothing in the Fort Ord conversion. "If we're expected to contribute [to affordable housing] we ought to be given property in exchange for that."

Councilman Gerard Rose pointed out that Fort Ord already contains plenty of relatively new housing that could be used for low income families, but is now going to waste.

"A lot of people might be surprised to learn that the housing that is not being used doesn't amount to several dozens [of homes], but hundreds," Rose said. "It's criminal that the homes are deteriorating and after a few more years won't be capable of being inhabited."

Next week, the FORA board will tackle the issue of increasing affordable housing requirements and decide whether a housing trust should be formed to provide financial assistance to first-time home buyers.

On July 1, Farr wrote a letter to FORA chairman Jerry Smith recommending that the agency adopt new minimum requirements for affordable housing in every new development on the former Army base.

Farr suggested that future developments include:

- 10 percent of homes in the "very low income" range selling from $70,000 to $80,000;
- 10 percent of housing set aside for low-income home buyers who could purchase houses ranging from $120,000 to $130,000;
- 20 percent designated for moderate housing priced between $160,000 to $175,000; and
- 10 percent set aside for "work force" housing, which would be available at prices ranging from $240,000 to $275,000.

All the housing units would be "permanently protected" for resale or rental to people within the low- or moderate-income ranges, according to Farr.

"FORA has a great opportunity to do something truly meaningful and significant about the most important public policy problem confronting our local communities today," Farr wrote.

Celebrate July 4, Carmel style, with free food and drink

THE CITY of Carmel and numerous community groups invite the public to a family Fourth of July celebration from 1 to 4 p.m. at Devendorf Park.

There will be a short ceremony including a color guard presentation by the Monterey High ROTC and performance of the national anthem.

Then the fun and games — including a pie eating contest, bubble blowing competition and sack races — will begin. The Sound Bytes, an upbeat rock n' roll band, will entertain the crowd all afternoon.

Free hot dogs, watermelon slices, popcorn, ice cream and drinks will be provided. People are also welcome to bring their own picnic lunches.

RETIRE

employee depends on job classification and years of service, Guillen said.

The program will be offered to all city employees, except firefighters and police officers, who recently received a new lucrative retirement plan.

Regular city employees are eligible for their full retirement at age 55. The city uses a formula — multiplying the employee's years of service by his final salary by 2 percent — to determine retirement.

Currently, an employee with 30 years of service making $80,000 a year could retire at age 55 at $48,000 a year. The golden handshake would allow that same person to retire with $51,200 a year.

Retiring from the city wouldn't preclude an employee from taking a part-time job for a non-government entity. "They could make another income and still receive the CAlPERS benefit," said city personnel specialist Jane Miller.

Instead of replacing the employees who retire early, the city would rely on contract workers to pick up the slack. "I don't want to equate the reduction of payroll with the reduction of services," Guillen said.

The window of opportunity for Carmel workers to take advantage of the golden handshake will be open for 90 days — from Sept. 5 to Dec. 1

The early retirement program prompted discussion about how the city will contend with its rising costs and sluggish revenues.

'One of the reasons we're doing this is because of our inability or unwillingness to forcefully go after a new revenue source.'

— Dick Ely

"One of the reasons we're doing this is because of our inability or unwillingness to forcefully go after a new revenue source," said councilman Dick Ely.

Carmel Mayor Sue McCloud disagreed and pointed to the council's recent decisions to pursue a paid parking program at the north lot of Sunset Center and charge a parking fee to tour buses.

The mayor also pointed to the council's attempts to move forward with a downtown paid parking program and a business improvement district, which were met with widespread opposition.

"We're not going to find something that everyone embraces unanimously," she said. "We're going to have to bite the bullet and get behind some source of [new] revenue."

VISA

related a twisted, bureaucratic tale of increased post-9/11 security, a backlog of applications from U.S.-bound tourists, and a passport lost in the bowels of the U.S. consulate.

'I am not the kind of person to give up ... but I gave up. didn't know what to do'

— Bruno Weil

"I am not the kind of person to give up . . . but I gave up. I didn't know what to do," the conductor said.

The responsibility for getting Weil's visa rested with his agent in New York, Hugh Kaylor, according to Bach Fest executive director Willem Wijnbergen. The agent got the necessary paperwork from the Immigration and Naturalization Service June 9, which he forwarded to Weil, who then took the final step by asking the Frankfurt consulate to enter the visa in his passport.

"I sent them everything on June 18," Weil said. But several weeks later, officials at the consulate informed him they couldn't find his visa application or his passport, and that it would take several weeks to sort through a huge backlog of applications, anyway.

"You cannot even speak to anybody, except to people who say, 'It's no use to have any further discussions,'" the conductor said.

Political muscle

That's when he turned to Wijnbergen and Bach Fest artistic director Nana Faridany for help. They contacted Senator Dianne Feinstein, Congressman Sam Farr and Mayor Sue McCloud. All three sent appeals to Bodde.

"Feinstein and Farr used special Congressional channels. They have ways of getting things noticed in embassies and consulates," said McCloud, whose career with the CIA included postings, in Paris, London, Tokyo, Stockholm and Bern.

At first, the response from officials in Frankfurt was the same: Weil's passport couldn't be found. Wijnbergen began lining up alternate conductors.

But then, a sudden reversal. Weil was told he could get his visa Tuesday, July 8, if he appeared in person at the Frankfurt consulate. He said he'll take a high-speed train that morning, return home in the evening and then board a Lufthansa flight from Munich to San Francisco the next day — one day before rehearsals start on Thursday.

"It would have been such a shame if Bruno hadn't made it for opening night," McCloud said. "He's done such a tremendous job keeping the orchestra together during these two years when Sunset's been closed, and he had such a hand in shaping the project and getting it moving."

In 1997 Weil expressed frustration over the decrepit facilities and dreadful acoustics at the old Sunset Center, which had been built as a school auditorium in the 1930s and abandoned by the school district in 1964. His comments, which were widely interpreted as a threat to quit, helped motivate the community to tackle what turned out to be a $21 million renovation project. Now that it has been completed, the maestro is eager to see the glorious new concert hall he helped create.

"I can't wait," Weil said.

PURPLE HEART

Andy Tridento

ognize decorated veterans and other postal heroes.

Tridento, now 55, works as clerk at the Carmel Post Office on Via Nona Marie. He's already purchased several sheets of the Purple Heart stamps, which help Tridento and his fellow veterans know "we're not forgotten," he said.

Though the Purple Heart is a symbol of bravery, Tridento explained that it's "one of those awards that, in a way, you don't want to get," because it is preceded by wounds suffered in battle.

The Purple Heart was originally created as the Badge of Military Merit by General George Washington. It is also posthumously awarded to those killed in action.

Back in action

After being wounded in 1969, Tridento was taken by helicopter to a hospital in Taynin, South Vietnam. He spent only two weeks there before returning to combat.

Tridento soon realized he hadn't fully healed. "I was back out for about a week and then my forearm bust open again," he said. "They stitched it up and sent me out again." The young sergeant, in fact, had no desire to stay in the hospital. "It sounds weird, but you don't want to leave your buddies."

Throughout the war, Tridento and his comrades-in-arms never called themselves by name, but by nicknames. Tridento said, matter of factly, that he was always called Wop.

Tridento served two tours of duty with the First Cavalry Division and left the war zone in January 1972. But he stayed in the Army, serving nearly 25 years before retiring as a first sergeant in 1993. He has been stationed at Fort Hood, Texas; Fort Lewis, Washington; Fort Dix, New Jersey and Fort Ord, where he met his wife, Areeratana.

Tridento patrolled a Vietnam jungle in 1969, before he was wounded by a rocket-propelled grenade.

He also served in Germany and Korea and trained ROTC recruits in Mansfield, Penn.

After retiring, Tridento began a new career with the postal service.

Though the war ended decades ago, his memories of Vietnam have not dimmed.

Without hesitation, he recalls the day he was drafted, May 8, 1968, and he is able to recall to the minute when he was wounded: July 23, 1969, at 4:10 p.m. — three days after the first lunar landing.

"You never forget," Tridento said.

OFFICERS

Carmel City Council at its August meeting.

Two to fill

The arrival of Burbank, who is working the night shift, leaves two more openings for sworn officers — plus one dog — in the department's full force of 15. Officer Larry Bagley and his K-9, Dax, retired this week, as did Sgt. Terry Chandler.

Tim Meroney, the city's full-time building official and a reserve police officer, has been putting on his uniform a couple shifts a week to help fill the voids left by Cpl. Ron Spicer and officers Martin Crackel and Phil Nash, all of whom are on medical leave.

"We are going through some challenges with personnel shortages. Every time we move forward, it seems like we take a step backward," Rawson said. But he has two or three more qualified applicants in mind, including another female officer. "I'm anticipating this will be a good year for us."

Rawson still has more recruiting to do, since CPD is also short a dispatcher, a parking officer and a supervisor. In the meantime, dispatchers have been working 12-hour shifts and recently retired parking patrolman Bob Riddle is marking tires a few days a week as an independent contractor.

As for the unfilled police dog spot, Rawson hopes to get a new K-9 soon.

Land a big fish, win cash

THE ANGLER who hooks the heaviest salmon, halibut, tuna or sea bass this holiday weekend will head home not only with weeks' worth of fish dinners, but 1,000 bucks.

Other cash prizes will be awarded for lighter catches, and the person who has the best three-day weight total will win a vacation in Baja California.

Those with less fishing luck can buy raffle tickets, instead. The Ninth Annual Fish Derby benefits the Monterey Bay Salmon & Trout Project, and costs $15 per day or $35 for all three days.

STORY AND PHOTO/MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

MAX MAZZOTTA, an almost 5-year-old English bulldog, has gained a certain notoriety at Carmel Beach: He skateboards, skim boards, rides between Dad Hawk's legs – paws on handlebars – on his Suzuki motorcycle, and catches waves off Carmel Beach riding tandem on the front of Dad's longboard. And he loves it all.

The thrill of fast times has been with him since puppyhood when he zoomed down hills and around corners in his dad's arms as they skateboarded together. When a little older, he stood alone on the skateboard as his dad pushed, then graduated to riding alone, impatiently extending a foot to make the board go faster when it slowed down. He leans into curves and grins at earthbound dogs as he speeds by, ears flowing back gracefully in the wind.

Max is the secret heartthrob of many a female Carmel Beach dog who admire his derring-do, but his heart belongs to Peanut, a charming, high-jumping Jack Russell whose Mom Alana is Dad Hawk's girlfriend.

At home in Carmel, Max is mellow and hangs out, watching TV on the couch with his professional motorcycle racer Dad until he nods off and begins snoring as only a bulldog can snore. "He's like my little kid," said Dad Hawk.

Max loves it when Uncle Zac visits from Santa Barbara, bringing along his little brother, two-year-old English bulldog Boozman. They'll soon be having a joint birthday celebration here at the family home. Max is hoping for his very own wooden skim board.

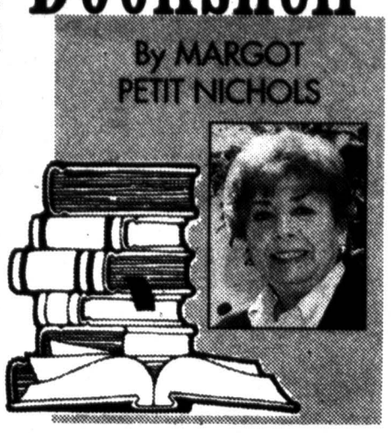
Jazzman's novel a Faustian story, complete with metaphysical border collie

The Bookshelf

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS



YOU'VE HEARD it many times over: Those blessed with creativity are generally creative in several arts, not just one.

A case in point is Carmel Valleyite Bruce Forman, jazz guitarist now turned novelist.

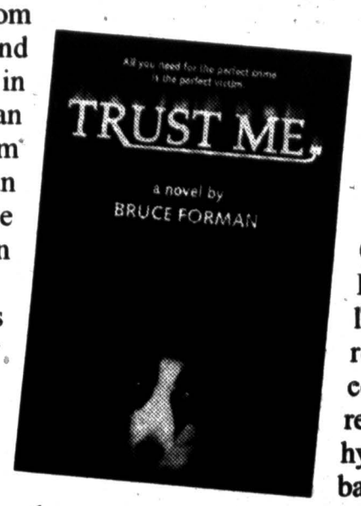
"Trust Me" is Forman's first published venture into the literary world — and it's a stunning one.

"A tale of eros, enlightenment — and em-bezzlement," "Trust Me" relates the tale of a jazz musician guitarist, Sam Mann, who hungers and thirsts after fame. He has the talent, he has the experience, all he needs is an entrée into the big time. He puts his career into the hands of a modern day Faustian devil named Jimm Dibbook and the reader watches helplessly as Sam descends into "a surreal joke," a hell of his own making, — orchestrated by Dibbook.

Making one bad decision alters Sam's life profoundly, but as all good heroes must, he withdraws to the wilderness and finds himself in the company of a wise shaman, an Indian chief named Gray Feather, whose canine companion, Scout, a border collie, becomes Sam's metaphysical guiding light.

Sam's savior is an 84-year old immigrant Irishman, Frank Krieger, whose money and wisdom bring Sam back from total destitution and helps reinstate him in the world of jazz, an almost spiritual realm in which Sam can regain his grip on the world and thus gain redemption.

Forman's book is tightly plotted, very well written, with characters nicely defined and expanded. The reader cares about the protagonist and the good people in his life. Set primarily in San Francisco, from which the author hails, we see goodness in the form of the shaman, of Scout, and of Krieger, contrasted with evil which Dibbook exemplifies so perfectly before descending to his own death. But not before Sam forgives him out of pity for his twisted soul.



Yes, Forman's novel of Sam Mann is an Everyman story, an allegory of good and evil with a caveat that we are all ultimately responsible for our own redemption.

Along the way, the reader comes to know what drives a jazz musician, what a musician feels when he's transported by his own music, and the joy of creating jazz with other musicians when they come together perfectly in improvisation.

Forman's 285-page trade paperback is handsomely produced by Lost Coast Press, 155 Cypress St., Fort Bragg. It is available at most local bookstores, and retails for $15. Border collie Scout peers at the reader from the cover with hypnotic eyes, over a background of an acoustic guitar. Note the logo type art in the title — which will give a clue as to the intent of the book.

Meanwhile, back in the real world, Bruce Forman, as a jazz guitarist, is founder of Jazzmasters Workshop, a nonprofit music mentoring program that operates at Carmel-by-the Sea's Youth Center, Carmel Valley's Magic Circle Center, Seaside's Boys & Girls Club, and in Big Sur at Captain Cooper School.

He is seen and heard at local and Bay Area jazz venues, and, in fact, is being featured Thursday evenings at Wills Fargo Restaurant in Carmel Valley Village.

You can meet and chat with Forman at two booksignings: at the Henry Miller Memorial Library, Highway 1 in Big Sur on the July 4 weekend, and on Saturday, July 12 at the Thunderbird Bookshop, The Barnyard Shopping Village, Carmel. For Henry Miller information, call the Henry Miller Library at 667-2574 and The Thunderbird at 624-1803.

JOANNA MARTIN and Illia Thompson both writers and poets, will read from their works at 7 p.m. Friday, July 11 at The Thunderbird Bookshop, 3600 The Barnyard, Carmel. Admission is $5. The readings are presented by The National Writers Union Local 7. For information, call John Laue at 684-0854.

HIGH SCHOOL poets will read at an open mike during the 7 p.m. Tuesday, July 8 Poetry Circle at the Monterey Public Library in the Community Room, 625 Pacific St., Monterey. Poet Patrice Vecchione will host the evening. Free. As well as high school students, recent grads, ages 14 - 19, are welcome to attend. Call 646-3949 for info.

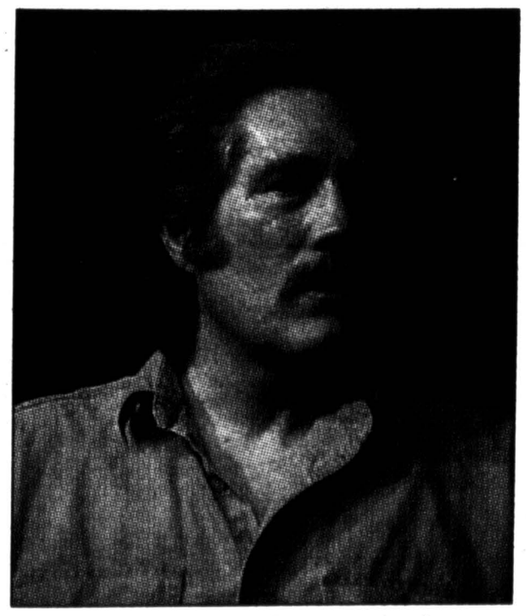
The secrets of Leonardo da Vinci



Spend an evening with Leonardo da Vinci at 7:30 p.m. in two Saturday performances, July 5 and 12 at the Cherry Center for the Arts, Guadalupe and Fourth. The one-man show, presented by Unicorn Theatre, stars performing artist Taelen Thomas as da Vinci. The performance will find Thomas explaining the advantages of being an illegitimate, left-handed country boy in the 15th century. He will tell stories of his unequaled, multi-faceted career. All tickets are $10. For reservations, call 649-0259.

'Brigadoon' at the Forest Theater — everything except the heather

By DEBORAH SHARP

EXCEPT FOR the lack of real heather on the hill and the almost Mediterranean weather on opening night, the Forest Theater does make a marvelous setting for Lerner and Loewe's 1940's award-winning musical "Brigadoon," the story of a fantastical 18th century Scottish village in the Highlands which only appears to regular folk every hundred years.

In the play, presented by the Forest Theater Guild, it appears to two lost 20th century hunters from New York City: one, a confirmed cynic, Jeff Douglas (Mitchell Davis), and the other, Tommy Albright (Jeffrey Thompson), who doesn't realize that he's a romantic idealist just waiting to meet his match.

That match comes along in the person of Fiona MacLaren, played winningly by Gracie Poletti. Fiona is as romantic as Tommy, and she knows it. Her younger sister Jean is about to marry Charlie Dalrymple, but Fiona is willingly waiting because she hasn't found the right man. All of this is charmingly conveyed in the first scenes and musical numbers.

There is one problem looming, however. A young malcontent, Harry Beaton, is getting angrier by the minute because he loves Jean and can't bear to see her marry Charlie. Sam Given, who plays Harry, not only gives a convincing performance as the only unhappy person in Brigadoon, but his dancing is absolutely first-rate. Tara Panattoni, as Jean, also adds grace to several choreographed scenes.

While Tommy and Fiona are falling emphatically in love, Meg Brockie, daughter of a gypsy, is pursuing Jeff, who just wants to take a nap. But Meg, played by Phyllis Davis, is determined to have her way with him, and the two play off each other well. Davis is delightful in her forthright persistence.

In general the lead voices are good, although not consistently so. Several who start off strong in the first act begin to waver by the second. A notable exception is Terence Courreault, as Charlie Dalrymple. His two solos, particularly the lyrical "Come to Me, Bend to Me," are really fine. Likewise the chorus of townspeople, divided into clans, provides a strong foundation of dance and song as the story unfolds. The wedding scene, chase and dirge are especially good, and the pipers and sword dancers are highlights. Another plus are the convincing Scottish accents which literally everyone maintains throughout the performance. As of opening night, however, there were a few things that still needed work. Not all the spoken lines were projected well enough, and the orchestra had some awfully shaky moments.

The set by Carey Crockett is simple but effective, especially the stained-glass of the "kirk." Jane DeLay's staging of the original Agnes DeMille dances helps create the magic of the play. And Adriana Wellisch's costumes add beauty and authenticity. It plays at 8 p.m. Thursday through Sunday until July 16.

Nostalgia, optimism, disaster tales and a fond farewell

Pine Needles

By Sissi Maleki

Nostalgia prevailed at the huge Willis W. & Ethel M. Clark Foundation's 50th anniversary bash at the Hyatt as the local Who's Who recalled its many community activities over the years for groups like the Alliance on Aging, American Cancer Society and the Institute of Speech and Hearing . . . Board prez Patricia Duran presented the group's $10,000 "Investment in Community Fellowship" award to Carmel's Matthew Miller, just finishing up med school at Boston U. prior to returning here as an orthopedic surgeon. Proud uncle and grandmother Paul and Freddie Miller accepted the award for him from Selection members Phil Nash, Max Tadlock, Don Freeman, Candace Ingraham and Sharon Coniglio . . . An award for years of service was given to June Duran Stock, with fellow board members Mary Capson, David Wilsey, Tim Duran, Saul Weingarten, John Bailey and Paul Lee and hubby Morgan cheering on . . . Meredith Mullins of CTB/McGraw Hill spoke of how the Clarks, the company's former owners, believed that tests were meant "to help the teacher help the child" . . . Donna Jett won rave reviews for the panels she created illustrating the accomplishments of the foundation. Guests included Kip & Jay Hudson, Mary Adams & John Bailey, Morley Brown & Ron Weitzman, Dana & Ted Calhoon, Nancy & Rick Kernoll, Harriet Shanner, Tom & Sherry McCullough. Shirley & Jack Holt, Joanne Millard, Sharon & Ed Bradford, Norma Jean & David Keyston, Artie & Lee Early, Susan & Sabastian Bordonaro,

Tourists & what ails them

Obsessive Awe Personality Disorder - Occurs most frequently at sunset on Scenic Drive if the sky is clear. Symptoms: Tourist drivers' sense of awe at the scenery is such that they're overcome by a desire to truly experience the Monterey Bay's Marine Sanctuary, and expect you – the strolling local – to guess their intentions and lead the way by diving over the rocks and into the water – whether you want to or not.

Dyslexia Touristum – Found among drivers of cars with either out-of-state license plates or out-of-area plate frames. Symptoms: Drivers will stop at intersections with no Stop signs and drive right through intersections that have Stop signs.

Fast-Food Stupor – Begins at visitor's moment of realization that no fast-food facility is within sight. Found among those who neither live near here nor have access to CNN news. Symptoms: Inability to make self-feeding decisions due to perception of choice overload in Carmel eateries; easily recognized by an unrelenting and unblinking stare at menu in hand or on the wall.

Honeymoonitis – A condition heard, not seen. Biblically-relational sounds made as locals walk past windows of inns in town at various times of day.

Carmelus Shock Syndrome – Tourist's delusional belief of having landed in the wrong state because the sun is nowhere to be seen. Symptoms: Wearing shorts, halter-tops and goosebumps, and standing on street corners begging anyone to direct them to a woolen clothing shop.

Soroptimists look to the next year

Soroptimist International of Carmel Bay gathered at Spanish Bay for their annual installation of officers luncheon . . . New officers include Elizabeth Bush as prez and Tammy Jones as Prez-Elect . . . Lee Chamberlin gathered a full table of close friends — Morley Brown, Millie Brown, Artie Early, Kitty Ragsdale, Judy Raible, Doris Jones, Eleanor Lusignan, Jackie Craghead and Jeanne Brehmer. Jeanne looked stunningly gorgeous – no exaggeration! The secret? "It's called retirement!" she quipped. It's probably also called Emma Jean – her 10-month-old grandchild . . . Former board prez Bernie O'Keefe said it's a tough time for her group, Ag Against Hunger, which distributes surplus crops from the valleys: "The little guys are really suffering . . . ." Ilana Enns and mom Gail Enns are prospective members who are in the midst of renovating their Anton Inn in P.G. Refreshingly, it'll be in the Japanese style . . .

Red Cross group gathers

Our local American Red Cross held its Annual Meeting Buffet at the Carmel Chapter House. Chef John Galbreath had just returned from a storm disaster stint in Kansas. He's also founded the Culinary Response Team which trains chefs for disasters, an idea he got after helping out at 9/11. Mayor Sue McCloud's got her plate full – she's not only in the midst of the exciting Sunset Center opening but she's even playing the role of a bartender at the Forest Theater's "Brigadoon" production . . . Others present included former Carmel mayor Ken White & wife Jean, Virginia Shannon, Fran Sackerman, Kevin Cole, Phyllis Crockett, Marcia Zelns and Diane Green.

Salvation Army says goodbye to leaders

A group gathered at longtime Salvation Army fairy godmother Morley Brown's home to bid adieu to James & Laura Sullivan who led the Salvation Army for the past several years. They will be moving to Salt Lake City . . . Others who cheered them off were board prez Patsy Strand, Elizabeth Castle, Flo Snyder, Hugh Barton, Sean Flavin, Edith Echiuji, Breck Tostevin, Cliff Bagwell & Walter Alsky and Yvonne Rilling.

"SE HABLA ESPAÑOL"

Unique summer entertainment runs rampant . . .

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

LOOKING FOR a truly local summer experience (besides feeling sorry for shivering tourists)? There are plenty to choose from.

• FILMS IN THE FOREST continue at The Outdoor Forest Theater (Santa Rita at Mountain View, Carmel), with two films next week: "A Night at the Opera," the 1935 Marx Brothers comedy will be shown on Tuesday, July 8, sponsored by the Monterey County Symphony, and "Breakfast at Tiffany's" will be shown Wednesday, July 9, sponsored by Le Bijou jewelry.

Films start at dusk and are $5. Don't forget to bring a picnic basket, blankets, and pillows to make viewing comfy.

• MONTEREY BAY THEATERFEST, presented by Pacific Repertory Theatre, will continue Saturday and Sunday, July 5 and 6 at Custom House Plaza, Monterey. Admission is free, with entertainment for all the family.

Each morning performance begins at 10 a.m. with entertainment for children. Songs by MaryLee commence at 11 a.m., and at noon, the Fairy Tale Theatre Troupe takes the stage with classic stories to delight all ages directed by John Rousseau.

At 1 p.m. The Human Chess Game is held with live actors — a blend of scripted story, improvised comedy, choreographed stage combat and audience participation.

• PARKFEST at Devendorf Park features Sound Bytes at the city's July 4 barbecue from 1 to 4 p.m. The following Friday, July 11, Parkfest resumes its regular free noon-to-1:30 p.m. musical entertainment with Alan Berman Quartet playing swing and jazz standards. •

SUNDAY AFTERNOON free concerts from 2 to 3 p.m. at The Outdoor Forest Theater continue July 6 with Terrence Farrell on classical, Spanish and flamenco guitar. On Sunday, July 13, performing artist Taelen Thomas will present a one-man show as "Mark Twain on the Mississippi."

On Sunday, July 20, Layne Littlepage and Barney Hulse will team up for "Noel, Cole and Friends," a performance of sitty songs by Noel Coward and Cole Porter.

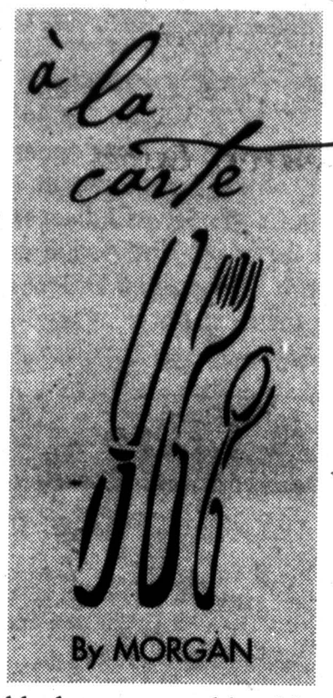
EPSILON — authentically Greek, authentically terrific



IT'S THE only Greek restaurant in Monterey County, according to Epsilon owner Petros (Peter) Mungridis. But we daresay, even if there were a lot of competition, Epsilon would be everyone's favorite. This is a restaurant with charm, wonderful dishes, delightful ambiance, great service — and all because Mungridis has a tried and true talent for cooking, an eye for detail, and, as he says, laughing, "a fear of losing."

Epsilon Fine Greek Restaurant has been in the same location on Tyler Street (directly behind the State Theater on Alvarado) for 13 years. It's a street that doesn't' get much tourist foot traffic and so "it's no accident people come here," Mungridis told Morgan. The restaurant is packed for lunch, and dinner reservations are strongly recommended, so popular with locals is this 50-seat restaurant.

The wait staff is attired in black trousers, white shirts, black vests and ties, with a white waiters' apron tied neatly about the waist — very much as at Tadich's or Sam's in the City. Our server, Troy, took very good care of our party.

A complimentary delicious and unusual dipping sauce, skordalia, is served to be scooped up with the excellent Palermo Bakery bread. The sauce is made of dried bread crumbled, macerated and blended to a smooth consistency with olive oil and fresh garlic and lemon juice. You may want to eat this with a spoon — it's that good.

Seventeen appetizers ($5.95 - $13.25) are followed in the paneled, triptych-style menu by method of preparation: Five baked dishes ($13.95 - $14.95); three stovetop items ($14.50 - $15.95); five rotisseried dishes ($13.95 - $17.75); and 11 grilled specialties ($14.75 - $22.95) are identified with their Greek names, but are described nicely so diners know exactly what they will be served.

Off to a good start

There is a combination plate of appetizers ($10.95) that will start the evening off to a good start for two or three of your party. There are dolmadakia, mini falafel, calamari, shaved slices of lamb gyros and — served with a yummy dipping sauce.

Diners will find such well-known Greek specialties as dolmadakia — the dish by which Mungridis measures all Greek restaurants — are prepared differently as an appetizer ($5.95) and as an entrée ($14.95) — spanakopita, taramosalata, saganaki flambée, avgolemono soup, moussaka, pastitsio, taskebab, and gyros. And all grilled fish, lamb, beef, and chicken are seasoned to perfection — many with olive oil, lemon juice and fresh parsley — others skewered with tomatoes, green peppers and Bermuda onions.

Patience and know-how

Baked Greek foods require intricate and time-consuming preparation, which probably accounts for there being so few Greek restaurants, Mungridis speculates. If you've ever put together a moussaka, you know layers of eggplant, meat filling and béchamel sauce (in Epsilon's case, a saffron béchamel) must be assembled and topped with Parmesan before being baked. The classic Greek pastitsio combines layers of pasta and delicately spiced meat filling, and finished with that saffron béchamel before baking. Lamb shanks are braised very slowly in Epsilon's special red sauce ($15.95) and are one of the signature dishes here.

Mungridis received his early training at the Ritz Carlton in Chicago. He started his own restaurant, The Picnic Box, here in Carmel-by-the-Sea behind Carmel Plaza in 1983, followed by another restaurant, The Mission Street Cafe (where Tommy's Wok is now). He sold that in 1989 and took a year and a half off to go to Greece. When he returned, his mother, Irini, who was 74 years old then, came over to teach him the art of Greek cooking and created the Epsilon menu.

Our table of three thoroughly enjoyed a grilled lamb sirloin filet ($16.50); sautéed chicken kebab ($14.50); and filet of tilapia ($15.50) — easily the best tilapia I have ever had. The grill marks on this sweet, fine-textured but firm fish added another flavor dimension. The dinners came with crisp Greek salads, vegetables and rice pilaf. Heavenly baklava can finish your meal, paired with a demi tasse of coffee from bitter to sweet — your choice.

A small but thoughtful list of California and Greek wines offers by-the-glass, or bottles from $18 to $32.

As for lunch, there's a shorter menu, a complete luncheon for around $10 — with entrée, salad and rice pilaf served on one plate.

And while dining at Epsilon, admire the extremely attractive wall murals painted by Amy Magill.

You'll love Epsilon. Go there soon.

St. Mary's antique show comes to P.G. for 46th year

By MARGOT PETIT NICHOLS

TWENTY-EIGHT antique dealers from all over the state will come to St.Mary's by-the-Sea Episcopal Church in Pacific Grove for a three-day show beginning Friday, July 11.

Hours for the 46th annual antiques show will be 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. The church is at 146 12th St.

"Challenges and Quirks of Interior Designer Frances Elkins" will be the topic of Diane Bower's 3 p.m. talk on Saturday. Elkins was responsible for most of the decor in Monterey Museum of Art's historic La Mirada. There will be no charge for the lecture, but there is a $5 entrance fee at the door for the antiques show which will be good for all three days. Lunch will be available each day and a snack bar will offer morning beverages and mid-afternoon sandwiches and desserts.

Proceeds from the event are used to support St. Mary's various ministries and community outreaches. For information, call 373-4441.

Crispo talks about art career

ARTIST DICK Crispo, whose 78th one-man show opens July 5 at the Carmel Art Association, will present a talk at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, July 9 in the same venue. He will discuss his work, career and philosophy as an artist. The public is invited to the free lecture at the galleries, located on Dolores between Fifth and Sixth, Carmel-by-the-Sea.

AMENDED NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE of SHINOBU TABATA
also known as AMY TABATA
Case Number MP 16619

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of SHINOBU TABATA or AMY TABATA

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by HIDEKO INOUYE GRAVES in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that HIDEKO INOUYE GRAVES be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A HEARING on the petition will be held on July 11, 2003 at 10:30 a.m., Dept.: 16, in the Superior Court of California, County of Monterey, 1200 Aguajito Road, Monterey, CA 93940.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in Probate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.

Attorney for Petitioner HIDEKO INOUYE GRAVES, 196 Del Monte Blvd., Pacific Grove, CA 93950. (831) 375-2126. (s) HIDEKO INOUYE GRAVES, Attorney for Petitioner.

OPINION

Editorial

The fate of Rippling River

THE FIRST thing to be done is reassure the elderly and disabled residents of Rippling River in Carmel Valley that nobody is going to abandon them.

The sudden announcement from the Housing Authority of Monterey County last year that their long time home is no longer habitable left many of the residents of the 1940s-era motel fearful they'll have nowhere to go. They love the security and comfort of Rippling River so much — one resident said it offered her the first opportunity in her life to live without a caregiver — they can't bear the thought of giving it up, despite its dilapidated state.

The indifference, even callousness, of some housing officials has only added to the discomfiture of vulnerable residents who know they won't be able to afford a place to live if the county housing authority stops giving them one for practically nothing. The proposal to build a completely new facility at the old Carmel Valley airport — just a stone's throw from Rippling River — should have been gratefully accepted by the residents. The fact that they howled in protest instead speaks volumes about the faith they have in the officials who made the proposal.

At the same time, the housing authority is right to insist that it has more responsibilities than just taking care of the 79 Rippling River units and the people who call them home. The taxpayers, first of all, deserve to have their money spent wisely — something many government agencies don't seem to care about. Maintenance expenses at Rippling River are just too high and so is the cost of rehabilitation, housing officials say. It would be cheaper to build a new complex, they claim.

Also, there are many other low-income residents of Monterey County who need housing assistance. It isn't right for the housing authority to spend such a big chunk of its annual budget on just one complex. Whether Rippling River is rehabilitated or replaced, this funding imbalance will have to be corrected.

The biggest obstacle right now is the hostility between housing officials and Rippling River residents and their supporters. They agree on the goal — taking care of the elderly and disabled — but they've started to hate each other over the method. A surprising amount of anger was shown at last week's meeting, when the housing authority voted not to rehabilitate Rippling River.

That's where county supervisor Dave Potter steps in. He's already offered to be a peacemaker, and with his expertise as a politician and a general contractor, he's the right man to arrange a truce over all the outstanding issues: from negotiating finances, to selecting a site, to choosing the siding and the windows. Rippling River residents, their advocates and housing officials should sit down with Potter. And they should let him decide what to do.

Boggles the mind

Dear Editor,

For whom is Assemblyman John Laird working? Certainly not the people. The people voted overwhelmingly to dissolve the water board, a do-nothing body which has wasted millions of taxpayer dollars over the past 25 years . . . and done nothing to increase our water supply. But Assemblyman Laird, for reasons that boggle the mind, will oppose SB 149, which carries out the voters' wishes. He chooses to support the continuance of a water board which long ago failed the Peninsula. What are his real reasons for ignoring the populace?

John L. Palshaw, Carmel

Our precious little river

Dear Editor,

In 18th century England, where Adam Smith fathered the capitalist economy of free enterprise, the sole source of heat was coal. Smith declared that the mine close by the town it supplied was an evil monopoly. I'm not sure he had anything to say about water — probably because they had plenty of it then.

Here and now, both the San Antonio dam and reservoir and the Nacimiento dam and reservoir, operated by Monterey County, also serve a flood control and recreation use. Of course, these tap a much larger source of water than our little Carmel River. However, it should be noted that most of the dams and reservoirs in the U.S. were constructed primarily for flood control and incidentally serve recreation needs. Look at the Tennessee Valley, for example, since this is where it all began.

But our dams and reservoirs are owned by shareholders who do not necessarily live here, and cannot be blamed if they are not concerned with flood control or recreation. Unlike other coastal communities — such as Santa Barbara, Ventura, and even Santa Cruz — they sell water, not flood control or recreation.

So, where does that leave us here in Carmel and Carmel Valley, where we have so precious little water to use? Certainly, we should have more say than neighbors who have other sources of water. The most eco-

Carmel Drug Store sold

By TAMARA GRIPPI

GREGORY BENEDICT, longtime owner of Carmel Drug Store, sold the business this week to a familiar face at the Ocean Avenue institution: store manager Ross Arnold.

After 33 years as owner, Benedict was ready to pass the business on to Arnold, a seven-year veteran at Carmel Drug. "It may continue for another 30 years if the landlords don't get too greedy," Benedict quipped this week.

The Carmel business officially changed hands July 1.

Ross Arnold (right) thanked his former boss, Gregory Benedict for selling Carmel Drug Store to him at an affordable price.

Arnold said he plans to maintain the same mix of merchandise — including cosmetics, imported soaps, fragrances, stationery, film, batteries, clocks, watches mirrors, gifts, cards and sundries — and continue to offer home delivery for prescriptions.

One of the city's oldest businesses, Carmel Drug now offers the only pharmacy in town. Surf 'N Sand's pharmacy closed in May, though its retail business continues under the ownership of Bruno's Market's Fermin Sanchez.

Arnold and his wife, Erin, plan to manage Carmel Drug together. Though Arnold declined to reveal the sales price, he credited Benedict for offering "a deal I could afford."

"I want to thank Greg for giving me this opportunity," Arnold said. "He made some sacrifices to let the store continue."

Arnold said he plans to continue the personalized service approach he learned from Benedict. "We know a lot of our customers on a first-name basis," he said.

'Just when you thought it couldn't get any worse'

Dear Editor,

The writer of a recent letter to the editor lamented that so many drivers were having difficulty dividing their attention between their cell phone use and their driving. On our daily walk this morning, we had to dodge a car whose driver was both talking on his cell phone and reading while driving (more or less) his car. Scary!

spending $65 million, and called MPWMD's proposed desalination plant in Sand City a "pipe dream."

Alan Edelstein, the lobbyist hired by the water board to fight McPherson's bill, also spoke against the bill and most of Steinberg's amendments. Edelstein said the district would have "no problem" meeting the three-year deadline, but he argued that affordable housing should be dealt with in different legislation.

"We also have serious disagreement with the denial of the voters' right to approve projects," he said. Joining him in opposition were MPWMD board chairman Zan Henson and representatives of the League of Women Voters, the Sierra Club and the Association of California Water Agencies.

Steinberg said his changes would make the bill more fair and shift its focus to water supply rather than governance, though he said revamping the water board could serve as a "back-end remedy" if the water-supply goal is not met.

With his amendments, the committee passed the bill 9-0, but the exact wording is far from final, according to McPherson's chief of staff, Pete Montgomery. By the time SB 149 reaches its next committee hearing, he said, it might require that a new project produce even more water, or that more work in addition to an EIR gets done in the next three years. The bill might also give more details on what, exactly, "sunset" means.

Although McPherson accepted the revamped bill, he did not endorse Steinberg's amendments, Montgomery said.

"Bruce committed to moving something forward, and it was obvious in the committee that without these changes, the bill was probably not going to get the necessary votes," he said.

Democratic Assemblyman John Laird, who opposed SB 149, said the changes "move the bill in the right direction because it makes it about water supply and affordable housing."

He refused to say what he thought should happen if the three-year deadline is missed or how much water the bill should require, but said, "If I'd had it my way, the affordable housing aspect would have teeth."

Those issues will be worked out later, Laird said. "I think the bill's headed toward a good situation for everybody."

Mayor Dan Albert seemed resigned to accepting major changes to McPherson's bill. "We started from zero and we got some change, and we have to credit McPherson a lot for that," he said.

Albert also said he felt most of the committee members, even those opposed to the original bill, were dismayed by the district's 25-year failure to provide water.

In addition, although the 10,700-acre-foot figure mentioned by Steinberg seemed to refer to the State Water Resources Control Board's 1995 order that Cal-Am was illegally pumping 10,730-acre-feet a year from Carmel River, some believe Steinberg's number would allow more water for development because conservation measures have reduced the overdraft amount.

Montgomery said the bill's final figure will be hammered out in discussions with Peninsula decision makers.

"We're going to work with the locals to outline what their water needs are — looking at the current situation, as well as growth and development and their general plans to determine future needs," Montgomery said.

The bill is scheduled to be considered by the Assembly Elections, Redistricting and Constitutional Amendments Committee July 8, but could go straight to the appropriations committee in August, according to Montgomery.

"It will still be a work in progress," which could take as long as a month to rewrite, he said. "We want to make sure the mayors and other people who asked us to carry the bill get a little bit out of it."

Tree planting halted over viewshed concerns

By MARY BROWNFIELD

CARMEL MAY have a reputation for putting trees before people, but people should still have a say on where those trees are planted, according to city administrator Rich Guillen, especially if they might block an ocean view. A forest-friendly group planting trees along Scenic Road ran head-on into that issue last week when the city told its contractor to stop.

"We have residents living down there who are concerned about their views," Guillen said, adding that forestry workers have often been asked to trim or remove trees on public property that block views of the ocean. "Our concerns should not only be to replenish the forest, but to preserve the viewshed."

Clayton Anderson, whose Friends of Carmel Forest group paid to have 10 Monterey cypress planted on Scenic and two locusts placed in First Murphy Park, said, "We went through all the hoops."

That process included placing stakes showing the locations of the trees so residents and passersby would know, obtaining an OK from the Carmel Forest and Beach Commission and collaborating with city forester Mike Branson, according to Anderson.

The stakes held tags describing their purpose. "I explained what we were doing and showed him the tags we put out there three weeks ahead of time, so that if anyone had problems, they could call me," Anderson said of his meeting with Guillen and other city officials. "And nobody did."

Employees of John Ley's Tree Service started planting the Scenic trees Thursday, but Guillen stopped them Friday when he went down to check out Anderson's stakes and saw the planting was already under way.

He said he was worried the stakes did not do an adequate job of notifying the public. "They might not realize that the stake and card meant [trees would be planted there], or they might see a tree there and wonder, Why in the world is the city doing this?' and of course, the city's not doing this."

Branson, who has the authority to say where trees should be located, had some of the new cypress uprooted.

"I identified spots along Scenic they could use to replace lost trees or trees which are in severe decline," he explained. "And three of the trees were not in locations I pointed out, so they were removed, at least for the time being."

Guillen, Anderson and Branson will develop a schematic showing exactly where the trees should go and then check with neighbors to make sure they have no concerns.

"We all have the same goal," Guillen said. "We just need to make sure we balance all sides."

POLICE LOG

a missing persons report later with Marina DPS.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Independent contractor for a cable company contacted a Lincoln resident to collect payment for an outstanding bill. Resident became upset because the person came to his residence to collect the money without identifying himself. Officer was able to confirm the subject's identity and that he is an independent contractor. Resident advised to contact the cable company to arrange payment or facing having his cable disconnected.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male burned both his feet by stepping on hot coals while on the beach with his father around 1644 hours. His father brought him to CFD and he was subsequently transported to CHOMP, where he was treated for second-degree burns to both his feet and released.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Suspect driving a black 1987 BMW contacted at Mission and Sixth and suspected of driving on a suspended/revoked drivers license and providing false information to a peace officer.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Ford Ranger collided with a Volkswagen Passat in the intersection of San Carlos and Sixth.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female called 911 and reported her husband was involved with a trespasser at the San Antonio property. Suspected trespasser had left the area when CPD units arrived and her husband had left to go get some food. Husband later contacted and said the subject was told to leave and complied. There was no hostility and no charges were to be pressed. Apparently there were civil problems concerning the subject's firm in the past. During the investigation, the officer recognized the subject and the property owner requested he be contacted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Male Pebble Beach resident, 38, stopped at Highway 1 and Valley Way and arrested for driving under the influence with a blood alcohol content greater than .08 percent. His black 2000 Ford Mustang was towed and impounded by Carmel Chevron.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of petty theft from a hotel at San Carlos and Fifth; $250 in miscellaneous items taken.

Big Sur: Violation of a restraining order near the 49-mile marker of Highway 1.

Carmel Valley: Assisted County Animal Control at a Carmel Valley Road residence. A Rottweiler and a pitbull escaped from the yard while no one was home. A subject reported being bitten but medical attention was refused.

Carmel Valley: Traffic stop at Rancho Fiesta Road and West Carmel Valley Road.

Carmel Valley: Past-tense theft from a vehicle parked at a Marquard Road residence. No suspects.

Carmel Valley: Information taken at West Carmel Valley Road and Boronda Road.

Carmel Valley: Theft from a Paso del Rio residence.

Carmel area: Information taken at an Upper Trail residence.

Carmel Valley: Trespasser at a Carmel Valley Road residence.

Carmel Valley: Grand theft from a vehicle parked at a Laguna Robles residence. A suspect broke into the vehicle and stole a wallet and checkbook.

MONDAY, JUNE 23

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of Pumpkin being seen in the front yard area of city hall. Courtesy notice left for Pumpkin's owner. A previous warning for dog at large in the business area had been issued on 01/27/03.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of possible child abuse received from Child Protective Services. Address later provided was determined to be in the county area. Contact made with county communications, and information and investigation referred to MCSO.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Follow-up regarding investigation of a trespass at a San Antonio residence. Contacted an architect. Male subject identified himself as the person who walked onto the residence yesterday and who was contacted and advised by the owner to leave the property. Residence is under construction and the subject said he was looking at the floor plan because of his profession. His intention was not to cause any problems. He left immediately after being advised by the owner. He had no idea police were notified or he would have stayed to resolve the matter.

Carmel Valley: Vehicle burglary at a Carmel Valley Road address. An item was taken from the caller's car.

Carmel area: Past-tense malicious mischief to a Carmel Rancho Blvd. business.

Carmel Valley: Theft from a Nason Road residence.

Carmel Valley: Check/credit card fraud at a Berwick Drive address. A female resident provided her bank information to a subject on the telephone she believed to be a bank representative, and she later discovered several fraudulent charges.

Carmel area: Theft of mail from a Spindrift Lane residence.

Carmel Valley: Assisted another agency at an East Carmel Valley Road location. Conducted a check of the residence after the owner reported her son might be there without permission.

Carmel area: Credit card fraud at a Taylor Road residence. Someone attempted to use the resident's credit card at an athletic shoe store.

POLICE LOG

Second for operating a gas leaf blower. He was found to have no prior contacts for this CMC violation and was warned.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a male adult lying in the street at Carpenter and Third at 0008 hours. As the passerby tried to determine if he was all right, another resident came out and collected the male and assisted him back into the residence. Passerby requested police check on the subject's welfare to make sure he wasn't injured. He was intoxicated and very agitated over his daughter dating a certain subject. That person came by the residence and the man got angry and tried to reach into the vehicle to pull the person out, but this frightened the subject, who sped off. The resident tried to get out of the way and due to his level of intoxication, lost his balance and fell. He suffered scratches to his elbows but refused medical attention. Subjects counseled.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: A black and silver 2003 Ford Mustang was burglarized between 2015 and 2335 hours while parked at Ocean and Mission. Forced entry gained via window, and $5,490 in miscellaneous items were taken.

Carmel Valley: Suspicious circumstances at an East Carmel Valley Road address.

Carmel area: Pasttense burglary of an Upper Walden Road residence. A Sony PlayStation was stolen.

Carmel Valley: Vehicle check in Don Piero Park.

Pebble Beach: Suspicious circumstances at a Sunset Lane residence.

Carmel Valley: Contacted a citizen at a Sleepy Hollow Drive residence.

Pebble Beach: Open door at a San Carlos Road residence.

Big Sur: Information taken at a Highway 1 address.

Carmel area: Civil child custody issue at Cabrillo Street and Serra Avenue.

Carmel area: Towed a vehicle from Highway 1 and Ocean Avenue.

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 25

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Follow-up conducted regarding an animal courtesy notice issued to a Santa Fe resident. Possible solutions for discouraging barking were provided. She will give the officer's contact number to a neighbor whose dog may also be in violation of excess noise.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of grand theft at Scenic and 11th south of the 11th Avenue walkway. $650 in miscellaneous items taken.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Mercedes collided with a Volvo in the intersection of Carmelo Street and 13th Avenue.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of stray cats being fed in the area of a bank parking lot. She reported being concerned for the three kittens. A dish was found on private property owned by a real estate agency. Mother cat and kittens described. Person making the report said she has asked the woman in the past not to feed the cats because the raccoons in the area could have access to the food and raccoons were seen in the area. Further action will be taken to assist the cats and eliminate the food access to wildlife.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Two subjects entered into a verbal argument over a bus driver allowing a passenger to board a bus at a non-designated bus stop. Driver stated to the passenger that he was acting in good conscience to assist the foreign tourist. Female who complained refused to seat herself while the bus was in motion. He stopped the bus at Monte Verde and 11th and summoned his supervisor to the scene. Officers intervened until the supervisor arrived. Subjects counseled.

Carmel area: Assisted the Internal Revenue Service at a Carmel Rancho Center business.

Pebble Beach: Check/credit card fraud at a 17 Mile Drive address. Resident reported a suspect misused some Visa account information to purchase goods and have them delivered to an address in Oakland. Advised to contact Oakland P.D.

Carmel area: Civil problem at 16th Avenue and Valley View Avenue.

Carmel Valley: Peace disturbance at a Hacienda Place residence.

Carmel Valley: Domestic dispute at a residence.

FRIDAY, JUNE 27

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a possibly disoriented subject at city hall. He was contacted and was found to be far from being disoriented.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report that a large commercial truck caught on overhead wires at Torres and Ninth. Telephone lines were partially pulled away from the house and were hanging low enough to be a hazard. SBC was advised by CPD dispatch.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a subject missing from the bus of a tour group at Junipero and Ocean. Missing person was a German national who did not speak English. CPD units scoured the downtown business area with negative results. The CBA was contacted for assistance and within minutes, the subject was located and returned to his tour group and bus.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of two subjects attempting to sell merchandise to local businesses and pedestrians in the area of Dolores and Seventh. They were advised of the necessity of obtaining a business license. They advised they would comply and obtain a license on Monday. They ceased all activity in the city.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Female reported she had been noticing a foul odor coming from the residence directly behind hers. While doing yard work, she noticed dog feces had been piled next to her fence. She was advised it was a city code enforcement issue and the proper authority would be notified. City hall was advised and she was notified to contact the city or the police department if she needs further assistance.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Six-year-old female and her siblings were with a teenage babysitter and a mother on Carmel Beach. The mother left all four with the babysitter while she went to get water from the car. She returned approximately 20 minutes later and learned one had walked away and disappeared. Units responded, a search was conducted and the child was found at Scenic and 12th with two women try-

2247 hours.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Anonymous party reported an abandoned canoe along the beach north of Del Mar. Conducted a beach patrol of the area and located a black fiberglass 25-foot canoe that appeared to be unseaworthy as there were breaks in the fiberglass body throughout the length of the canoe. No identifying marks or vessel ID numbers were located. The canoe was located in the county area north of Pescadero Canyon, so the appropriate jurisdictional agency was notified.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Traffic hazard observed at Lincoln and 11th. Two vehicle were parked adjacent to each other along the east and west side of Lincoln due to a nearby garage sale. Both vehicles were moved by their respective cooperative owners.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of difficulty resolving an animal noise problem at a Mission residence. Female neighbor complained his two Jack Russell terriers were barking constantly during the day while he was at work. He reported never receiving complaints from neighbors in other towns and tried to tell her his dogs were not the source of the barking. He obtained a recording device which identified another dog at a Junipero residence was the source of the barking. She was indifferent to his findings, so he brought them to CPD to document his attempt to show his two dogs were not the source of his neighbor's concerns.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a lost 6-year-old female who walked away from her parents in Mission Trail Park. Search conducted. She was later found at her residence by her parents, who returned home to check if she had gone home. She stated that without her parents' knowledge, she ran home ahead of her parents to get there before they did. She was instructed on the importance of staying within the line of sight of her parents during family outings.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a white Oldsmobile blocking a driveway at Dolores and 11th. Citation issued.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Report of a civil problem between two subjects. One has returned to Southern California and reported she has been attempting to arrange for a time and date to retrieve her property. She alleges the San Carlos resident has not returned her calls. He stated the furnishings in question are still at his residence and that they have been in communication regarding other matters. He stated she is not a rational person and tends to fabricate and lie about things. He e-mailed her while an officer was present. He was advised the matter is civil. Follow-up to be conducted.

Carmel-by-the-Sea: Anonymous report of two subjects trying to remove stop signs at Ocean and Carpenter at 0345 hours. Contacted the subjects at Torres and Sixth and they admitted to tampering with the stop signs but couldn't explain why. Both had been drinking. No permanent damage in area noted. They were admonished and a taxi was called.

Return to Sunset

I take great pleasure in inviting you to join us for our triumphant return to the fully renovated Sunset Theater, ten years in the planning and making. You will find listed here our entire program of events for summer 2003. But I want to let you know that in addition to the wonderful music we will play for you, there are many things which will make your visit to us more comfortable:

Beautiful acoustics!
Better sightlines!
Wider seats!
Sophisticated climate control!
Many more restrooms!
Access by elevator throughout the theater, even to the balcony!
Fully ADA compliant!
A real green room to meet the performers!
Convenient box office!
Better concession facilities!

Many people have worked very hard, and donated generously of their time and money to make this possible. We are very, very happy! Please join us to celebrate beginning July 19!

Dear patrons,

As you all know, the last two years away from the Sunset Theater have been very challenging for all of us — musicians, volunteers, and patrons alike. But we managed to meet this challenge successfully because of your continued support and generosity and that of our temporary hosts at Santa Catalina, the Naval Postgraduate School, All Saints Church, the Carmel Mission, Asilomar, Pacific Repertory Theater, and Church in the Forest. What a lot of places it took to replace Sunset Theater!

This summer we'll finally be home again, and we plan to do our utmost to express our appreciation to all of you by means of your reseating at Sunset Theater. When we assign seats in response to your ticket order, we will take into careful consideration all the ways in which you have supported us — your attendance record, your financial support, your hours of volunteering for us, etc., etc.. The first year in a "new" venue is always a bit experimental. I am sure that, together, we will find the best possible way to truly enjoy the new situation!

Make sure you place your ticket order early. And another important message to you, dear patrons: Please remind yourself that the price of a ticket, expensive though it sometimes seems, covers only half of what it actually costs to make that performance available. That's why we have to add this line at the bottom of the order form: With your generosity — in addition to your ticket order — you enable us to continue to serve you in the best possible way by producing great concerts . . . for you!!

I so much look forward to meeting and greeting you all at our great Sunset reunion this coming summer.
